

Paint Sedona

Winter/Spring

2011/2012 Workshops

& Painting Retreats

Join painter Michael Chesley Johnson for four days of outdoor painting in Sedona, Arizona.

Michael offers three types of workshops: a traditional workshop for all levels; for intermediate/advanced students, a mentoring workshop that may include an optional advanced topic; and painting retreats. The price of any workshop is $350. Each week is limited to 4 students. $150 deposit required.

What is the Traditional Workshop?

All levels of student are welcome, from beginner to advanced. Students may work in pastel or oil or other medium by arrangement. They can expect daily lectures and demonstrations on the basics plus personal help at the easel. (Michael will work in oil or pastel.)

What is the Mentoring Workshop?

This workshop is for students with significant plein air experience. Here, you'll have the chance to learn the finer elements of painting, information that usually isn't handled in a regular workshop. But it's not just about advanced instruction. It's an opportunity for the serious painter to address issues that are bigger than mere craft, many of which relate to the business of art. Or, if you just want to paint with a "guide" without reevaluating your life, you can do that, too! You can consider it a painting holiday or artist retreat, or just a time to paint without instruction and to meet other artists.

An optional advanced topic can be built into this workshop. Michael is offering "Design & Color" as the default topic, if so desired, and in it students will explore design options and alternate color palettes. If a student wishes a different topic (e.g. large format, small sketches, hiking to paint), it is "first come, first served."

What is the Painting Retreat?

This is a time for you to grow as a painter with Michael as your tour guide. This is a true "immersion" experience! You'll eat, sleep and work with your fellows, all in comfy group lodging.
